D. Data Protection

Answer: BD

vSphere Data Protection (VDP) creates image-level backups of VMs within your environment. It essentially captures the entire VM entity and stores it in a specified location. In the event of a VM deletion or other similar disaster, the VM can be restored in its entirety utilizing VDP.

vSphere Replication (VR) is a vSphere feature that copies VM information from one location to another. These locations can be within the same cluster, a different cluster, a different vCenter, or even a different datacenter. It is a continual copy of a VMs state performed on a defined interval. As with VADP, it replicates only the changes made since the last interval to reduce network bandwidth and increase copy times.
